Dr. Amit Prakash

Regional and Indigenous Politics in India: Identity and Development in Jharkhand

Wednesday on 3 December 2008 at 13-15 hrs

Universitetshuset (Main university building), room XI

Amit Prakash, Associate Professor at the Centre for the Study of Law and Governance, Jawaharlal Nehru University (JNU), New Delhi, critiques in his lecture the way the post-colonial Indian state has negotiated the questions related to tribal groups (adivasis) and the process of uneven 'development'. Jharkhand is a state in eastern India which was carved out of the southern part of Bihar in 2000.

All interested students and staff members are cordially invited!
