3. Work Report 2009

Report by Anna Lindberg and Lars Eklund.
(Enclosure 1)

See <http://www.sasnet.lu.se/workreport10.html>

In spite of being a turbulent year for SASNET in terms of uncertainty about the network's future after the Sida funding should expire on December 31st, SASNET carried out extensive work during the year, including organizing conferences and seminars, distributing planning grants, networking with students, researchers, embassies, etc, besides improving and updating the web site with its databases.

The board commended the good work being done, and put the Work Report aside.

4. Activities 2010

Oral report by Anna Lindberg and Lars Eklund.

Also referring to page 6 in the 2009 Work Report, where the activities during the beginning of 2010, and plans for the rest of the year are presented in detail.

The most important thing is of course the fact that Lund University on March 18, 2010, decided to give SASNET SEK 830 000 as extra budget funds, in addition to the basic funding of the same amount already provided to SASNET for 2010. The additional subsidy comes from the Vice-Chancellor's strategic research funds and is earmarked for the preparation of a study of Lund University's common and long-term strategy on collaboration with South Asia. The task includes exploring possibilities to find external collaboration partners and secure new external funding for SASNET's continued South Asia-related activities. A report is to be delivered to the Vice-Chancellor by 30 June 2011. In awarding the funds, the Lund University management stated that it highly values SASNET's Internet gateway, newsletters, and data bases built up over the last ten years. These are to be kept intact and continue to be maintained.

Anna Lindberg participated in an official Lund University delegation to India during the last week of April 2010. During her visit she was involved in preparing an MoU to set up an ICCR Chair professorship at Lund University from the academic year 2010/2011. This is due to SASNET's cordial relations with the Embassy of India to Sweden, that has also funded specific SASNET seminar activities during the spring.

In March 2010, Anna Lindberg and Lars Eklund visited the Nordic Institute of Asian Studies (NIAS), and the Asia Research Centre (ARC) at the Copenhagen Business School in Copenhagen. The visit was part of an ongoing effort to strengthen SASNET's collaboration with Nordic institutions engaged in South Asia related research and activities.

Lars Eklund continues to visit Swedish South Asia research institutions. In March he travelled to the Stockholm Environment Institute (SEI), and later the Centre for Sustainable Development (CSD) at Uppsala University.

A second Nordic South Asia Conference for Young Scholars has been held 18–20 August in Höllviken. See <http://www.sasnetconference.se/>

SASNET has also continued to be involved in organising seminars and workshops in collaboration with partner institutions at Lund University and other Swedish universities. A seminar on Arsenic in Drinking Water was held at Lund University on 5 May 2010. The seminar was organised by SASNET and the Lund University Centre for Sustainability Studies; the Division of Water Resources Engineering, Lund University; KTH-International Groundwater Arsenic Research Group at the Dept. of Land and Water Resources Engineering, Royal Institute of Technology (KTH), Stockholm; and The Swallows India-Bangladesh.

During the fall 2010, a seminar on Microcredits in India and Bangladesh will be held in October, and a Sri Lanka seminar in November.

5. Financial Report 2009

Enclosure No. 2. See <http://www.sasnet.lu.se/utfall2009.pdf>

Anna and Lars presented the financial report for 2009. The net result was a surplus of SEK 243 000, to be transferred into the budget for 2010.

The board put the Financial Report 2009 aside.

6. The future of SASNET

Enclosure No. 3, on SASNET's current organisational structure.
SASNET's budget for 2010 was also presented.

Suggestion: Since the economic preconditions have changed – SASNET no more being funded by the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency, Sida, and instead being funded entirely by Lund University – the organizational structure must also change. The board now representing several Swedish universities (and also with representation for NGOs and other Nordic universities) should therefore dissolve itself when the current term of office is over, by 30 September 2010.

Discussion: Anna presented the current situation, and referred to all failed efforts to find alternative funding to keep SASNET as a national Swedish network, about her contacts with other universities, etc. Instead, a new situation appears with Lund University willing to keep SASNET running for at least one year more. The extra funding from LU makes it possible to carry on SASNET's work – except the distribution of planning grants – while at the same time investigating the prospects of future South Asia related activities within the framework of Lund University.

An intense discussion followed. All participants to the meeting expressed their joy and satisfaction that Lund University by granting extra funds has secured SASNET's immediate survival. It was generally acknowledged that SASNET's fate now lies in Lund University's hands, and therefore the board thought it correct to ask the VC of LU to dissolve the board. Instead the discussion focused on suggesting new strategies for the future, with an ambition to secure new national and/or international funding so that SASNET regains its character of a national Swedish network for South Asian studies.

Prosun Bhattacharya recommended efforts to get support from business, and make use of possible fund raisers. Prosun also suggested that renewed contacts should be had with Sida, STINT, Vinnova, and other funding agencies and check if any kind of support could be given. He also proposed that the use of SASNET's web site might be restricted to users willing to pay for the services. Finally, the Vice Chancellors of the Swedish universities should be approached directly and be presented facts about the benefits that SASNET really offers.

Staffan Lindberg suggested that the Vice Chancellor, Lund University should be approached and be asked to take an initiative to hold a meeting for Swedish university representatives on the use of their budgetary funds for internationalization. It could be a way to get funding for SASNET.

Staffan also proposed efforts to seek Nordic and European solutions, by collaborating with existing organizations/networks such as the Nordic Institute of Asian Studies (NIAS), Nordic Association of South Asian Studies (NASA), British Association of South Asian Studies (BASAS), and others, plus approaching the European Union for support.

Finally, Staffan stressed the importance that SASNET keeps contacts and continues to collaborate with all Swedish and Nordic universities (for example by organizing joint seminars) in spite of the fact that SASNET's national board is dissolved.

Apropos the failed efforts to find alternative funding for SASNET, Gunnel Cederlöf pointed out that 2009 was a bad year in general when it came to applying for financial support. The proposal to make the other Swedish universities pay membership fees to fund SASNET also failed, but not so much because of the university managements but by researchers then not keen on collaboration and not willing to pay for services they have been given for free till now.

Jan Magnusson rejected the idea that SASNET's web site should be turned into a paid website. It would harm the free networking that is SASNET's most vital feature.

Gunnel Cederlöf summarised the discussion, pointing out that the board may only approve activities and make decisions for the time period up to 30 September, when the board is dissolved. The budget for 2010, presented at the meeting, can therefore not be approved of in total. Gunnel also requested Anna and Lars to present the Financial results for SASNET regarding the first six months of 2010 to the board before the end of September. The board may then have a final meeting over telephone, to approve this.

Decision: The board expresses its deep appreciation for the work that Anna Lindberg and Lars Eklund have carried out in order to find alternative funding for SASNET after the end of Sida funding.

The board also expresses its gratitude towards Lund University for its commitment to continue fund SASNET after 1 October 2010. SASNET has a strong support among researchers working on South Asia related projects in Sweden, and therefore the board members look forward to keep on collaborating within the framework of SASNET also in its new shape with Lund University being the sole responsible authority.

Finally, the board recommends the Vice Chancellor, Lund University to dissolve SASNET's board from 1 October 2010, and to let the current Directives for SASNET expire from the same date.

7. Other businesses/ SASNET's South Asian Reference group

Suggestion: SASNET's South Asian Reference group (<http://www.sasnet.lu.se/asiaregggroup.html>) should be dissolved at the same time as the board is dissolved, on 30 September 2010.

Decision: The board thanks the members of the Reference Group for their good work to support SASNET over the years. The board decides to dissolve the group from 30 September 2010.
